Henry VIII and his six Wives

- Henry VIII is very well known. This is because of his six wives he had. The first wife was Catherine of Aragon. She had a daughter for Henry but he wanted a boy. When Catherine became too old to have any more children Henry wanted a divorce. At that time, Henry had already fell in love with Anne Boleyn. It took a while for this divorce but finally Henry was single. About two weeks after his divorce, Henry married Anne Boleyn.

Anne Boleyn

- Anne Boleyn was Henry's second wife. Before Henry was divorced with Catherine, Anne became pregnant. Convinced it was a boy, Henry didn't want Anne to not be revealed and his "son" to not be king. However, when Elizabeth I was born, Henry wanted to divorce Anne but chose to execute her. But because she didn't do anything wrong Henry tortured Anne's brother and three noble men to say that she had had an affair. With the lies spread Henry sent her to the tower. However, Henry did love Anne because he hired a swordsman to execute her. This then led Henry to marry Jane Seymour.

Jane Seymour

- Jane Seymour was said to be Henry's favourite wife. This was because Jane had given Henry a son Edward. Jane however died during childbirth. After Jane's death, Henry wore black for ages and he didn't marry again until about four years later. Henry then married Anne of Cleves

Catherine Howard

- Henry married Catherine when she was only a teenager. When Henry didn't have to pretend that Catherine had committed adultery, he sent her straight to the tower where he didn't hire a professional swordsman, he just hired an executioner. When she died Henry then married Catherine Parr.

Catherine Parr

- Catherine Parr was Henry's final wife. She wasn't really a wife at all; she was more of a nurse. She had nursed Henry until the end of his life. Catherine moved on to make a family. Catherine had survived.
